Guiding Principles and Beliefs

The York Region District School Board's Mission statement calls upon us to "unite in our purpose to inspire and prepare learners for life in our changing world community."

One of our key values is that "we strive for equity, inclusiveness and diversity in all our programs, practices, facilities and people."

In embracing antiracism and ethnocultural equity, we commit ourselves to positive and equitable outcomes in all education programs and services for all of our students. We are committed to preparing students for a society in which diversity is recognized, respected and valued. We will, therefore, assist students to define, detect and reject all forms of discrimination.

York Region's guiding principles on Antiracism and Ethnocultural Equity Policy include:

- ◆ Board policies, guidelines and practices that ensure equity
- ◆ leadership that promotes equity and eliminates systemic inequities
- ◆ school-community partnerships that address the perspectives, experiences and needs of diverse racial and ethnocultural groups
- ◆ an antiracist curriculum
- ◆ recognition of the value of maintaining a student's ancestral language while acquiring proficiency in one of Canada's official languages
- ◆ bias-free assessment and evaluation procedures, flexible placement decisions and parental involvement in the process
- ◆ guidance and counselling programs that are culturally sensitive, supportive and free of racial and ethnocultural bias
- ◆ strong condemnation of racial and ethnocultural harassment
- ◆ equitable employment and promotion practices
- ◆ ongoing staff development on antiracism and ethnocultural equity

Purpose Of This Document

This document has been developed to assist York Region District School Board educators, in a practical way, as we progress towards success for all students in our schools. It is a resource to be used in assessing current practice, in identifying objectives for the School Plan for Continuous Improvement, in improving student achievement and in bringing observable change in schools and classrooms. In addition, it is intended as a tool to assist school staff in reflecting upon our own professional growth and the expectations achieved by our students.

This assessment instrument can be linked to three Effective Schools correlates: Authentic Home School Partnerships, High Expectations for Learners and a Safe Orderly Environment.

Ensuring Student Success: Antiracist Indicators for an Inclusive School supports the implementation of the York Region District School Board Antiracism and Ethnocultural Equity Policy #260.

Supporting School Plans for Continuous Improvement

---

School improvement requires teamwork, goals and data management. Schools have found that data management is a challenge. This resource is intended to assist schools in managing data from an antiracist perspective.

Suggested Uses

This document is intended for use in assessing antiracism indicators within an inclusive school. In our pursuit of continuous improvement, it will be a valuable tool for individuals and groups in reviewing schools/classroom practices, and in identifying strengths and areas for growth.

Teachers and Support Staff are encouraged to use this resource as a self-assessment tool. The Role of Teacher section will be of particular interest to individual teachers, as well as their divisions and departments.

A division or department will also be able to use this resource to ensure high quality programs, effective assessment strategies, supportive community relations and a positive school climate. Through the use of this resource, administrators will be able to identify exemplary practices, as well as areas in need of further growth in developing their school plans in collaboration with staff members.

A suggested activity is to use the Student Empowerment section with students in order to compare staff and student perceptions. Effective use of this section would provide authentic information about students and our progress in our antiracism initiatives.

Working with the School Council, perceptions can be assessed and clarified during the focussing and priority setting phases of the school planning process for continuous improvement.

The Climate and Management of Schools _____

Introduction

Every school has a "culture" unique to that school. The type of community, the mix of students and the focus and collective philosophy of the staff all help to determine the culture and climate (the learning environment) of the school. A supportive, inclusive learning environment is one that acknowledges the life experiences and perspectives of the school's diverse student body and that of the wider community. It is one that is free from harassment, violence, discrimination, and expressions of hate. It is one that focuses on the physical environment of the school, the school's regular routines and activities, staffing, classroom atmosphere and the policies and practices of the school. It is often referred to as the informal curriculum.

How a school looks and feels reflects its attitudes and priorities. Inclusive schools work hard to acknowledge racial and ethnocultural diversity in the routines of school life. This means going beyond occasionally recognizing the various racial and ethnocultural groups in the school at special events, to ensuring that the histories and experiences of all groups are reflected in all aspects of school life.

Inclusive schools also make a concerted effort to remove barriers to the hiring and promotion of teachers, teaching assistants and other staff who reflect the diversity of the community.

Community Relations

Introduction

The nature of the partnership established between the school and the community sets the overall tone for the interaction among students, teachers, and families. A supportive, inclusive relationship with parents and the community takes into consideration a variety of factors including attention to the ways in which we consider the diverse linguistic, cultural and faith traditions when welcoming individuals to our school. An inclusive school takes into consideration such things as family responsibilities, the importance of an extended family, work schedules of family members and the times and dates of religious observances.

All schools are required to set up school councils with a mandate to advise on many critical aspects of school life. School councils, by law, are expected to reflect the diversity of the school community and to enable all parents to assume a more responsible and active role in education in their community.

Where there is great linguistic diversity in the school community, a special effort is needed to ensure clear and effective communication with all parents. For most parents, the initial contact with the school, and therefore the first impression formed is by meeting with school support staff in the administrative office. It is important to ensure that support staff have the skills needed to handle linguistic, social and cultural barriers to communication.

The Role of the Teacher

Introduction

All teachers need to ask themselves:

- ◆ Do I believe that all students can learn and succeed?
- ◆ Do I believe that schools control the conditions for success?
- ◆ Do I believe that a true measure of equity is academic success?

The influence of teachers in the school and classroom is significant. Their knowledge, skills and values directly affect the learning and personal growth of their students, and they have an important influence on students' perceptions of themselves. By helping each student retain his or her sense of pride and self-worth, teachers can improve the students' chances to achieve and succeed.

All students, including students from racial and ethnocultural minority groups, are helped by open, accepting teachers who understand and value their backgrounds and experiences, and whose teaching is based on an unsterotypical view of their potential.

One of the most important tasks of a teacher is to create and maintain an environment that is welcoming and inclusive, and in which all students have an opportunity to achieve equitable results. In doing so, the teacher recognizes that not all students are at the same starting point. The teacher works to even out the odds for students who may be disadvantaged because of a number of experiences they have faced due to prejudice and discrimination based on race, ethnicity or faith. Teachers recognize that students might need different kinds of support in order to achieve, and ensure the appropriate support is provided. Teachers also recognize that there will always be differences in ability and achievement among students and that these differences are individual and not determined by race and ethnicity. In addition to this section, you may wish to use the Self-Assessment Exercise in Appendix A.

Formal Curriculum & Instruction

Introduction

Nora Allingham, in Antiracist Education and the Curriculum. A Privileged Perspective, says:

“The curriculum is textbooks and storybooks, the pictures, the seating plan, the group work, the posters, the music, the announcements, the prayers and readings, the languages spoken in the school, the food in the cafeteria, the visitors to the classroom, the reception of parents in the office, the races (or race) of the office staff, the custodial staff. The teachers, the administrators, the displays of student work, the school teams and sports played, the clubs, the school logo or emblem, the field trips, the assignments and projects, the facial expressions and body language of everybody, the clothes everybody wears...it is the whole environment.”

For the sake of clarity, however, it is useful to separate this broad category into two parts - the formal and informal curriculum.

The informal curriculum is described in almost all the other categories within this document. The formal curriculum is what you teach and how you teach it. It is the explicit messages conveyed through the subjects being studied and the lessons, textbooks, activities, projects and assignments associated with them. An inclusive curriculum is one that ensures all students can see themselves, not only inside the classroom, but also inside the curriculum. It is one in which a student's race, ethnicity, linguistic background and faith are recognized, respected, valued and validated, and where students can see themselves as a recognizable part of the Canadian fabric.

Assessment/ Evaluation/ Reporting / Placement _____

Introduction

Assessment/Evaluation/Reporting/Placement are linked activities. Traditionally schools have confined themselves to:

- ◆ assessment - the process of gathering information about a student's progress;
- ◆ evaluation - the process of interpreting the information in order to arrive at a judgement about the student's level of achievement;
- ◆ reporting - the process of conveying that information to the student, parent and guardian.

The Placement of the students has been a result of these focuses.

The inclusive school also uses the assessment and evaluative processes to determine whether achievement patterns exist within racial, ethnocultural or faith related student groups. As well, the inclusive school develops strategies for addressing and correcting inequities as they emerge. Teachers in the inclusive school recognize that bias exists in learning materials. They also recognize that the curricular delivery methods of teachers and the language, illustrations and images used are not neutral. Teachers in the inclusive school believe assessment, evaluation and reporting is a cyclical process. Students, staff and parents all have a role in helping students achieve with the best possible curriculum, teaching methods and a highly motivated atmosphere for learning.

Student Empowerment

Introduction

Successful students eventually take charge of and develop ownership for their own learning. In an inclusive school, students, staff and parents all take responsibility to ensure barriers to equitable treatment are recognized, and measures are developed to overcome those barriers. In an inclusive school, students actively discuss, debate and deal with issues of social justice within and outside the school setting, and do so with the support, encouragement and expectation of staff, administration, parents and community. They recognize the manifestations of prejudice, discrimination and stereotyping and are actively involved in the development of a school program and climate that is bias free.

1. My experiences in the classroom and in the school encourage me to become actively involved in working towards justice and fairness in the school and in the community.

Appendix A – Self-Assessment Questions

Teachers may find the following questions useful for identifying areas on which to focus in personal and/or professional development activities.

Part A

Use the following questions to explore specific teaching challenges you may face related to diversity or lack of diversity.

- How do I feel about having students from many racial and ethnocultural groups in my classroom?
- How do I feel about having a classroom with very little diversity?
- What are the implications, for me as a teacher, of the presence of students from a number of diverse racial and ethnocultural groups in my classroom?
- What type of diversity makes me uncomfortable?
- With what type of diversity am I most comfortable?
- What are the benefits of a racially and ethnoculturally diverse classroom?
- What are my expectations for my students?
- Do they differ from culture to culture or colour to colour?

Part B

Use the following questions to explore some of your own values and attitudes..

- What values do I have that I think are universally important?
- Am I comfortable or uncomfortable with racial or ethnocultural diversity? Why?
- How would I respond if one of my students made a racist comment or presented schoolwork that contained racist statements?
- Would I respond differently with a co-worker or a figure of authority who demonstrated racist behaviour? Why?
- Students in my school (or classroom) naturally form a variety of groups, among others, based on ethnicity, language, race and gender. Do I consider these groupings to be positive or negative? For whom? Why?

Part C

Use the following questions to explore the nature of your interaction with parents and/or community members.

- Have I talked with all or most of the parents of my students? (Give as accurate an estimate as possible).
- Who is missing from the list? Why?
- Do I know the communities from which my students come? What efforts have I made to find out about them?
- How many parents and community members have helped in some way in my classroom this year?
- What have they done?
- Are there other contributions I might seek from other families or communities?
- For what reasons do I get in touch with the parents?
- Do I give them good news, as well as bad?
- How many of the parents have attended at least one school council meeting this year?
- Who has been absent? Have I tried to find out why?
- How do I feel about the involvement of parents and community members in the school?
- What role do I expect parents and community members to play in the life of the school?
